Award-winning Christmas Shows in Middleton Hall

In 2006, the Christmas Show in Milton Keynes provided pictorial aids alongside Braille signs, to enable more people to enjoy the visual and sensory experience of wandering through the Never Never Land display:

‘For the first time ever, Lauren was able to get excited and tell me what was happening in the display rather than rely on me to tell her. She was able to understand that she was seeing a Christmas Peter Pan scene – without these special needs information boards, she would not have been able to follow what was happening in each display, on her own. This helps children like Lauren to become that little bit more independent and make discoveries on their own.’

‘The special needs information boards really did make a difference to Lauren’s understanding of what she was seeing. It may not seem a big thing – but it really made a big difference to Lauren. She signed all the way home, re-telling us what she had seen. It was a joy to see.’

(Lauren’s mother Barbara Burnett from Baldock in Hertfordshire)
