

Picture courtesy of Derek Walker

'It was an exciting place to work – we thought we were doing something exciting... It was a buzz.'
 (Ken Baker, CMK Architect 1970-81)

Philip Castle's 1980 poster of what would have been offered by the then proposed City Club, housed in a construction as big as the Shopping Building – with restaurants, bars, theatre, concert hall, museums, recreation centre, hotels, stadium and 'large entertainment spaces'.

FROM THE BOOK: THE HERITAGE OF MILTON KEYNES

The Story of the original CMK

...told by the people who shaped the initial ideas of Central Milton Keynes

