

Developing Communities

The first projects at Inter-Action MK were aimed at helping the new residents to develop a new community.

Sweet Sixteen aimed to get the people of the new Beanhill estate out of their houses to meet, share their memories and work together in planning and setting up events which would be the beginning of social interaction.

In those early days, the grounds were used to accommodate an older people's garden club, Sunday events and picnic parties.

Many youngsters who were unable to thrive in a mainstream school environment were referred by Social Services to work in a practical and supportive situation with the team and this led to some remarkable results.
