

Art in Education

The educational value of involvement in the arts has been proved many times over the years at Inter-Action MK. The Egg Show and Zerena were two projects where children had to find ways to communicate with an 'alien', making her feel welcome on earth and helping her to understand our lives.

In 1978 children became members of the 'Tri-ca Tribe' to help them recover their long-lost sacred emblem – the tooth of a triceratops.

In Simpson School a whole classroom was converted into a pirate ship and a Victorian project at Langland School gave children a wonderful insight into the lives of people at a different time in history.
