The Disability Worker's Tale

"I lived in London and we just couldn't get housing. We drove up the motorway. It was snowing so we came off at Junction 14 and started looking at the houses. I said, 'I like!' – and we've lived here ever since.

I like meeting and helping people, giving them support but sometimes just listening to someone can be very, very helpful. If you can just listen and understand how they are feeling about their disability it's lovely. It's nice to connect.

This is home. I am not a Londoner anymore – I'm a Keynie! I'm in love with my city and have been for years."
