Music at Bletchley Park

Music of all types featured at Bletchley Park, from Jazz to Operatic. Concerts and recitals were held at the Assembly Hall in Wilton Avenue by the various music societies, again to raise money for the war effort.

'I played in the Chamber Music Group (Andre Mangeot came once a week to coach us). Once the hall was built we performed concert versions of 'Figaro', 'Don Giovanni', and 'The Bartered Bride' etc... also full versions of 'Dido & Aeneas'. Frank Howes, the Times music critic came down to hear us and wrote a glowing report. The leading light in organising all this was Ludovic Stewart, a master from Eton. Our leading soprano was Rosamond Twinn.' (wife of key codebreaker, Peter Twinn).
