Stowe House

When the National Trust were given the Gardens in 1989, and Stowe House Preservation Trust started to restore and open the House to the public in 2000, Stowe once again was appreciated by appreciative visitors – for slightly more than a shilling but smart dress optional!

So, with ambitious restoration plans afoot and the aim to provide greater access to the estate for more visitors, Stowe has come full circle and is once again one of the most picturesque tourist destinations in Europe.

We hope to see you there as one of them!
